Public Service Recognition Week back in May

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_deletorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

After a year of hiatus, the CNMI, through the Office of Personnel Management and the Civil Service Commission, will celebrate Public Service Recognition Week from May 5 to 11 to honor the people who serve the Commonwealth.

At a press conference yesterday, PSRW committee public information officer Reina C. Camacho said public service recognition is a nationwide celebration as it is the same for federal, state, country, local and tribal government employees.

This year, divisions and departments shall be nominating and making their final selections for Department Employee of the Year.

The 2024 theme is: "We are United for a Greater Commonwealth."

The awardees will be recognized during the site visits during the week of May 5 to 11 at their respective offices.

Camacho said CNMI will hold its proclamation signing on May 1 from 2pm to 3pm at the Pedro Tenorio Multi-Multi-Purpose Center in Susupe.

The planning team, consisting of 20 government departments and autonomous agencies, have been working with their offices to select a Division Employee of the Year, Department Employee of the Year and Leadership Awardees.

The overall Government Employee of the Year will be announced and awarded at the Labor Day government picnic in September 2024.

The other awardees will be recognized throughout the week of May 6 to 11 on Saipan, and on May 9 and 10 on Rota. The Tinian schedule is pending.

Each year, Camacho said, the OPM and all its partners help people and organizations recognize the important work public servants do.

OPM acting director Joseph M. Pangelinan said Marie Tenorio Muna, whom he appointed as chairperson of the committee, formed a committee that planned, organized, and put the PSRW events together.

Pangelinan said it looks like they have a meaningful ceremony.

Pangelinan said PSRW started in 1995 in the U.S. and then it was formalized in 1988 under U.S. Senate Joint Resolution 242.

Victim in sexual abuse of a minor case asks not to move forward with trial

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The victim in a sexual assault of a minor case set for a jury trial this coming April 29 has asked the prosecution not to move forward with trial.

Last week, assistant attorney general Frances T. Demapan—the prosecutor in the sexual abuse of a minor case against Aldin Christopher Igisaiar—asked Superior Court Associate Judge Teresa Kim-Tenorio to vacate the April 29 jury trial against Igisaiar.

According to Demapan, after extensive discussion with the victim in this case in preparation for the trial, the victim requested not to move forward with the trial.

"The decision to move forward with prosecution is based upon more than whether there is sufficient evidence to prove that the defendant violated a criminal statute," she said. "The Commonwealth must also consider the impact of the crime on the minor victim and her wish to testify. After extensive discussion with the victim during trial preparations, the victim requests not to move forward due to the impact of this trial on her and her minor siblings."

Kim-Tenorio, for her part, vacated the jury trial, granting the prosecution's request to dismiss without prejudice the sexual abuse of a minor case against Igisaiar.

Without prejudice means the case can be refiled.

"While the Commonwealth still believes that the defendant committed the charged offenses, it must also respect the wishes of the victim and her desire to move forward with her life," Demapan said.

Igisaiar, 45, was charged with one count of attempted sexual abuse of a minor in the first degree, two counts of sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree, and disturbing the peace.

The incident happened on or between Nov. 14, 2014, and Nov. 14, 2016, according to the information filed by the prosecution.

Reyes' bench trial before Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph Camacho dragged on and what was expected to be a day filled with witness testimonies, turned into a day filled with back-to-back breaks to resolve issues regarding the admission of late discovery.

When the court reconvened yesterday morning to move forward with witness testimonies, the prosecution, led by assistant attorney general James Kingman, informed the court that new evidence had been brought to light just that morning.

It was later learned that the evidence—over 30 pages of documents related to a Request for Personnel Action for an extension of Reyes' contract dated Nov. 21, 2023—was given to the prosecution by parole officer Shirlene Laniyo.

Kingman, for his part, asked that the court grant the prosecution a continuance to further investigate pursuant to the newfound evidence.

Kingman argued that in trial, it is not unusual for new evidence to arise during the course of it, and added that the prosecution is entitled to a continuance to give the government enough time to investigate.

However, Reyes' defense lawyers, Joaquin Torres and Matthew Holley, told the court that they did not want a continuance and the only remedy was to exclude the newfound evidence or for the court to dismiss the case and declare a mistrial.

After listening to both parties, Camacho gave the prosecution 15 minutes—despite Kingman's multiple attempts to argue why a continuance is necessary to further review documents—to review the evidence and to speak with its witnesses about its statement that he has been accommodating enough.

"You charged Mr. Reyes with misconduct in public office, four counts of forgery. He's here now for his day in court. You charged the person, at the very least, as a prosecutor, you [should] have the amount of evidence [you need] to move forward with trial. So, we're going to take 15 minutes. I've been very accommodating to both parties. Now, you can take these few minutes to review these documents so we can move forward with some type of witness and make use of this day," he said.

After the court reconvened at around 4:15pm, the prosecution called its third witness, Laniyo, to speak on when and how she prepared them, why it was only brought to light during trial, and who instructed her to prepare them.

After about an hour of questioning, the court called for recess and is set to reconvene today at 9am.

According to Saipan Tribune archives, Kingman filed last February two separate cases against Reyes—one count of misconduct in public office and four counts of forgery.

Reyes allegedly forged and altered, on or about Dec. 20, 2023, the terms of employment of a person from 30 days to one year. This offense is punishable by imprisonment of not more than five years.

Also, Reyes and co-defendant Chuilian Fu are charged with one count of conspiracy to commit misconduct in public office, one count of conspiracy to commit theft by deception, and two counts of theft by deception in relation to the authorization of funds for the construction of a patio.

In this case, Reyes and Fu allegedly agreed last Oct. 4, 2022, to build a patio at the Parole Office that was to be built by a tailoring company owned by Fu, F&S Corp., in the amount of $9,997.80. In reality though, the patio was allegedly built using unpaid labor performed by parolees under the direction of Reyes.

Reyes has pleaded not guilty in both cases.

"We are grateful for the support of the CNMI Hazard Mitigation Grant Program and our federal partner, FEMA, in fortifying our school campuses against the impact of typhoons and natural disasters," said Education Commissioner Dr. Lawrence F. Camacho.

"School buildings and facilities' safety and their overall structural integrity to withstand threats of natural disaster is part of our overall initiative and commitment in providing our public school students a safe and conducive learning environment," the education chief added.

The $1.456-million FEMA grant will be for typhoon-rated windows and doors installation.

The central government's Hazard Mitigation Grant Program has taken the lead in securing the funding for PSS.

This is a 100% federal share. The installation of typhoon-resistant windows and doors will provide enhanced protection against extreme weather conditions, safeguarding the well-being of students, faculty, and staff members.

The project is scheduled to commence immediately, with a 120-day completion period that is anticipated for March 8, 2025. During the installation process, every effort will be made to minimize disruptions to daily school operations.

The governor's authorized representative, Patrick C. Guerrero, has assigned Peter M. Tomokane as project specialist working alongside PSS on this FEMA-funded hazard mitigation windows and doors' installation project on all the six schools.

In her notice of grant approval to Guerrero, director Kathryn Lipiecki of the mitigation division FEMA Region 9, said, among others, that the PSS project "has been determined to be Categorically Excluded from the need to prepare either an Environmental Impact Statement or Environmental Assessment in accordance with FEMA Instruction 108-1-1 and FEMA Directive 108-1-1 as authorized by DHS Instruction Manual 023-01-001-01, Revision 1."

Last Friday, CPA held its 2024 full-scale Triennial Airport Disaster Drill at the Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International Airport which simulated a plane crash involving about 200 people.

Also participating in last Friday's drill were Department of Fire and Emergency Medical Services, Commonwealth Office of Transit Authority, and volunteers from the Public School System Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Present to observe the drill were CPA Board vice chair Antonio B. Cabrera and Rep. Manny Castro (Ind-Saipan).

In an interview with Castro, he said it's always good to be proactive about natural disasters and emergencies.

"I'm glad to see that our first responders [like Airport Aircraft Rescue and Fire Fighting], the airport facility staff, and outside partners [like] CNMI Homeland Security and Emergency taking a proactive approach in preparation for situations like this," he said.

Meanwhile, in a statement from Cabrera, he said there is always room for improvement.

"We have to be prepared at all times. We have to be proactive. This is the kind of situation that we don't look forward to. But we have to be prepared at all times. Everything seems ok but there is always room to improve. It seems we were a little behind," he said.

According to CPA, the drill is a requirement under the Federal Aviation Administration's regulations that requires each U.S. airport to conduct a full-scale drill every three years.

It helps CPA review and assess its response to a disaster should it occur at the Saipan airport.

"This exercise is required by the Federal Aviation Administration to help CPA assess their response to a disaster should it occur at the airport," said CPA.

CNMI, JRM convene Inaugural Environmental Stewardship Working Group

ASAN, GUAM—The U.S. Department of Defense along with the government of the CNMI convened the inaugural CNMI Environmental and Land Stewardship Working Group in mid-March on Saipan.

"The CNMI ELSWG began as an idea to coordinate and share information about military training in the Mariana Island Range Complex," said

Randel Sablan, senior advisor, regional political-military affairs at Joint Region Marianas. "In addition to coordination with our CNMI partners in regard to military training and environmental mitigation efforts, with the ELSWG framework, we have offered to cover topics and issues across the spectrum of military activities in the CNMI."

During the meeting, members engaged in discussions on environmental and land topics focusing on the development of various projects throughout the CNMI. Topics discussed during the meeting included the Tinian North Field rehabilitation, Divert Airfield construction update, the CNMI Joint Military Training Project RDEIS update and status of the JRM Integrated Natural Resource Management Plan, to name a few.

"We take seriously our responsibility to stewardship of the environment and lands in the CNMI," said Rear Adm. Greg Huffman, commander, Joint Region Marianas, and the U.S. Indo-PACOM senior military official. How to burn tax dollars and have little to show for it

The progressive paradise of California has spent $24 billion over the past five years to attack homelessness. Not only has the problem gotten worse, state and local government officials haven't bothered to track where the money went. Is anybody surprised?

This month, the state auditor released a long-awaited report on "Homelessness in California." The findings confirm that the Democrats who run the Golden State are often more interested in political preening than looking for solutions that actually work.

"The state doesn't have current information on the ongoing costs and results of its homelessness programs," CalMatters reported, "because the agency tasked with gathering that data—the California Interagency Council on Homelessness—has analyzed no spending past 2021, according to the report."

California has a vast political-bureaucratic complex dedicated to homelessness—no fewer than nine state agencies and 30 programs, according to CalMatters—but the state's political class seems wholly uninterested in determining whether spending billions in taxpayer money under the guise of getting people off the streets does indeed get people off the streets.

Members of the state's Interagency Council on Homelessness issued a written response to the audit, claiming they were unable to perform their duties because ... wait for it ... they didn't have enough money. You can't make this stuff up.

The legislative Republican who requested the audit sensibly recommended that the state freeze "new investments" when it comes to homelessness until lawmakers can figure out where all the money has gone. Predictably, this brought a rebuke from a Democratic colleague.

"I don't think it's a time to stop," state Sen. Dave Cortese, D-Santa Clara, said. "I would be disappointed personally, professionally as a state senator, if the governor or Legislature negotiated away this year's investment in homelessness."

The senator might as well have endorsed lighting billions of dollars on fire as a means of helping the state's homeless survive the winter nights.

In the meantime, homelessness in the state has grown by 53% over the past decade, the Los Angeles Times reports, as Sacramento mindlessly showers more and more money into a failed system.

"These audit results are a wake-up call," said state Sen. Roger Niello, a Republican from Rosedale, "for a shift toward solutions that prioritize self-sufficiency and cost effectiveness." He might also advocate for dismantling the hyperactive regulatory apparatus that makes it virtually impossible for California to add enough housing stock to dent its shortage.

All of those suggestions will fall on deaf ears in the one-party progressive Eden. But Californians can't complain. They got what they voted for.

Trump's Hitler fascination is an ominous echo of the 1930s

Democracy is ailing. Around the world, strongmen seem all the rage. China's Xi, Russia's Putin, Hungary's Orbán, India's Modi and a clutch of Latin Americans, together with the rise of the right in Western Europe, attest to peoples' increasing willingness to embrace ruthless, mendacious leaders whom they credulously think can get things done, while eliminating their enemies (real or imagined).

There was once a widely held belief in Europe, which became a cliché, that Italy's 1922-43 "Duce," Benito Mussolini, made the trains run on time. It was supposed, falsely, that pre-World War II strongmen offered administrative efficiency and economic success.

Many commentators, not least in the US, see a resurgence of that era's fascism. Immigrants, Muslims and foreigners have taken the place formerly occupied by Jews as scapegoats for misfortune and modernity. Conspiracy theories flourish while public services languish.

Between the two wars, communism remained an ideology cherished by a minority and left-wing elites. But fascism, with its uniforms and mass rallies, calls to eliminate "anti-social elements" and patriotic bombast, was more genuinely popular. Might was seen as a virtue, the law as an instrument to be manipulated.

Donald Trump today promises to be a "dictator"—if voters buy what he's selling. He has spoken well of Hitler. Ruth Ben-Ghiat, author of Strongmen: Mussolini to the Present says Trump is pursuing a campaign designed to convince Americans that "authoritarian rule is superior to democracy."

A 2023 Pew Research Center survey in 24 countries showed that enthusiasm for freely elected leaders is flagging, and a median 59% is "dissatisfied with how their democracy is functioning." Three-quarters of those polled believe that "elected officials don't care" what "ordinary people" think, while strongmen do.

For those of us with an acute consciousness of the past, especially the European past, it is terrifying to see so many people oblivious to the horrors committed by the 1930s dictators. It's also dismaying to see history repeat itself, in the willingness of many of the world's "haves" to endorse tyrants. I was once asked about the politics of a tycoon whom I knew. I responded that he simply wanted to make the world a safe place for rich people—no more, no less. He was, and remains, a cheerleader for Trump, who granted him a pardon for a US fraud conviction.

The same was equally true of the "haves" of the 1930s. Much of the British aristocracy, including most notoriously Lord Redesdale and two of his daughters—The celebrated Mitford sisters—embraced Hitler. Diana married Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Fascist Party. Her sister Unity became so besotted with Hitler, with whom she forged a friendship, that she shot herself in the head—not fatally—in despair when World War II broke out.

If Churchill had not shown favoritism to his own class by leaving them at liberty, by my reckoning at least four British dukes—Westminster, Wellington, Buccleuch and Bedford—would have been interned during the war for their links to Nazism. Why did they do it? Because, like many of Europe's rich and much of the City of London, they were haunted by an imagined Bolshevik takeover, which they feared would cost them their fortunes. They embraced the fascists as enemies of communism.

In Berlin, in April 1939, the Duke of Buccleuch planned to attend Hitler's 50th birthday party, until the British Embassy induced him instead to go home. Even after war broke out, the duke pestered Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to seek a "face-saving peace" that would have allowed Nazi Germany to remain a Great Power. As late as July 1940, when Churchill had taken over, Buccleuch urged the Conservative chief whip to press the government to parley with Hitler. All this was an embarrassment to Buckingham Palace. Buccleuch was George VI's most senior courtier, Lord Steward of the Household. Only belatedly did the King acknowledge that Buccleuch's politics mad him an outcast, and ask him to resign.

A British historian has recently written that Buccleuch believed world war might bring revolution to Britain: "It was almost bound to lead to higher taxation and an end to the aristocratic way of life that had somehow survived World War I. His desire to preserve a strong Germany—even a Nazi one—to counter the spread of communism...was shared by a number of his fellow-magnates."

Lord Rothermere, proprietor of Britain's Daily Mail, was a notorious pre-war Nazi sympathizer. The historian and biographer of Hitler, Ian Kershaw, was once given a private guided tour of Mount Stewart, the former Northern Ireland home of Lord Londonderry, an appeaser who served as a minister in several 1930s Conservative governments. In Londonderry's study, Kershaw was

Stop saying ‘immigrants do jobs Americans don’t want to do’

The deaths of six immigrant workers in the collapse of Baltimore’s Francis Scott Key Bridge on March 26 sparked the kind of collective empathy that usually follows tragic events. President Joe Biden was among the many who offered his prayers. In news reports, the men have been called “kindhearted,” “humble” and “heroes.”

We should ask ourselves, is it only the tragedy that made them deserving of such labels? The disparaging way immigration is framed in the US any other time makes this outpouring of praise seem like a trope.

Routinely, we hear politicians, business owners and analysts—even the well-meaning ones—say that immigrants do the jobs that Americans don’t want (and for low wages), so we should be more open to embracing them as deserving of a place in our country.

Let me break it to you: That’s no badge of honor.

To frame the conversation about immigrant workers around their sacrifices—a necessity for them—only marginalizes already vulnerable members of our communities.

The topic of immigration remains a top issue. A recent Bloomberg News/Morning Consult poll found that it ranks second only to the economy for voters. As we get closer to Election Day, we shouldn’t be glorifying the fact that immigrants do jobs that no one else wants.

Instead, we should talk more about the lack of safety of those jobs.

The Baltimore tragedy underscored that construction is one of the deadliest industries in the US. As the focus turns toward rebuilding the bridge, it’s been reported that Latinos, who make up 31% of construction workers, think the task is too dangerous. Other industries that rely on foreign-born workers are just as hazardous. The Department of Labor reports that employees of poultry and meat processing plants are exposed to diseases that are resistant to antibiotics and have an increased risk of developing lung cancer.

The labor force behind this critical part of our food supply is made up of over 37% immigrant workers, according to an analysis of federal data by the Economic Policy Institute.

But we’d be remiss if we stopped there. U.S.-born workers are also toiling in poultry and meat processing plants—as well as building homes, repairing roofs and refilling potholes on overnight shifts. Our focus should be on finding ways to make every job as safe as it can be for everyone. Right now, all eyes are on Latinos, but this country’s disregard for the welfare of immigrant workers dates back centuries. Think about the Chinese who chiseled and blasted their way across the Sierra Nevada, digging tunnels and laying tracks for less money while working in worse conditions than their White counterparts. Their reward? Decades of restrictive policies that were designed to keep them away.

History shows that, despite the message that these jobs are some sort of down payment to be a part of our nation, somehow immigrants of color are left out. The xenophobic idea of America being only for Americans underlies the “predatory relationship between employer and immigrant employee,” says Bill Barry, the retired director of labor studies at the Community College of Baltimore County. That includes wage theft, most commonly in the form of unpaid overtime. The practice, pervasive nationwide, often goes unreported because immigrants fear unemployment or, if they don’t have legal papers, deportation.

Documented and not, immigrants have, in the words of economist Steven Rattner, been “essential to America’s post-COVID labor market recovery.”

Maynor Yassir Suazo Sandoval, 38, was from Honduras. Miguel Luna came from El Salvador. Alejandro Hernandez Fuentes, 35, and Carlos Hernández, 24, were natives of Mexico. Dorian Ronal Castillo Cabrera, 26, and Jose Mynor Lopez, 35, were from Guatemala. These six men who died while working on the Francis Scott Key Bridge should be remembered as part of that essential recovery narrative.

Outside of that, they had wives and children. They went to church on Sundays. They planted roots in the neighborhoods where they lived. At least two of them, Sandoval and Luna, volunteered at CASA, a nonprofit that serves and advocates for Latinos.

For 30 years, CASA has screened, trained and connected “good employees with good employers” in Maryland and other states, says Gustavo Torres, its executive director. At its hiring hall in Baltimore, he said, US-born Black workers give their Latin American counterparts tips on how to negotiate pay. Recently, both have united to ask for French classes so that they can talk to francophone migrants from Africa.

“These are the workers who build bridges that unite communities, not the walls that divide us,” Torres said.

There’s no clarity on the immigration status of all six men killed in the bridge collapse, but the tragedy galvanized advocates, business leaders and elected officials to band together and push for the Biden administration to extend temporary protected status to immigrant workers who have lived in the United States for 5 or more years, as was the case with at least three of those who died.

This way, immigrants would at least receive legal permission to work in the US, though it does not provide a direct path to legal residency or citizenship. “It’s an opportunity for the president to recognize the contributions they’re making” and a way to energize young progressive voters, Torres said.

It’s also a gamble, especially in an election year where immi-

Trump needs strong running mate to spread the word about farce hush money trial

Donald Trump’s hush money trial makes it more imperative than ever that he pick a credible running mate in the coming weeks to rally his supporters behind his defense.

With Trump sidelined from the campaign trail, there is no one currently in the GOP ranks who can replace him.

A solid pro-MAGA surrogate VP pick could be the answer.

She or he would be able to travel the country and draw attention to the ongoing farce trial in New York that has taken crucial time and money away from the campaign.

Does anybody honestly believe this trial is not politically motivated? Or that Trump will get a fair and impartial jury in liberal Manhattan? These are questions the GOP running mate can raise across the country in pro-Trump strongholds.

All Trump’s opponents want is to stop him by any means necessary, including locking him up. Democrats don’t care if they forever damage the judicial process by weaponizing it.

The reason Democrats need to stop Trump is because their own candidate is so weak. Joe Biden these days looks like he can barely walk as he gets off his helicopter. Not a great message to the world.

They may succeed in getting a conviction but in the process give Trump forces even more reason to vote this November.

It’s going to be difficult for the former president to endure the unprecedented media and legal barrage he’s facing. When prospective jurors were brought in on Monday, Trump already looked shaky and exhausted.

That’s why getting a running mate soon could be critical while he is held hostage in the trial.

The trial could easily backfire by making Trump look like a martyr.

Even if he’s convicted in the next few months, Trump can still run for president and become commander-in-chief. But it could lead to efforts by Democrats to block him from doing so.

The prosecution is leading with two completely non-credible witnesses, Stormy Daniels and sketchy lawyer Michael Cohen.

But Democrats are hoping Trump loses his temper during the trial or is charged with contempt.

Whoever the running mate is will be instantly the subject of a barrage of attacks. The crop of potential candidates includes South Dakota Gov. Kristi Noem, South Carolina Sen. Tim Scott, Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida, New York congresswoman Elise Stefanik, Sen. J.D. Vance of Ohio, and former congresswoman and Naval Reserve Officer Tulsi Gabbard of Hawaii. Other names are Sen. Katie Britt of Alabama, and Arkansas Gov. and former White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders.

Leading what’s described as an Apprentice-like search is Trump adviser Susie Wiles and the campaign has already hired a firm to vet candidates. Also influential in picking a running mate will be Donald Trump, Jr. and Melania.

fascinated to spot a white Meissen statuette of an SS stormtrooper carrying a Nazi flag. It had been presented to the British peer in 1936 by Joachim von Ribbentrop, then Hitler’s ambassador in London, when he stayed at Mount Stewart as an honored guest.

The diaries of US-born British MP Sir Henry “Chips” Channon testify to a commitment to appeasement at any price. When somebody said at Londonderry’s 1949 memorial service that perhaps the dead apologist for the Nazis had been right all along, the shameless Channon said: “Of course he was.” The dictators offered the only thing for which such people cared — security for their own kind.

Not much appears to have changed. In the US, it is terrifying to behold so many educated people enthuse about the prospect of “strongman rule.” The historian Timothy Snyder recently penned a notable essay denouncing the folly, as well as evil, of embracing such a course. Essential to the strongman myth, he writes, “is the idea that a strongman will be your strongman. He won’t.”

Jacob Heilbrunn, editor of The National Interest and author of a new book America Last: The Right’s Century-Long Romance with Foreign Dictators, argues that Trumpism—the GOP standard-bearer’s enthusiasm for the likes of Putin and Orbán—is “only the tip of the iceberg in a long history of US right-wing admiration for demagogues and despots elsewhere.”

“Trump is rebranding odious doctrines from the past as something new and shiny and attractive,” the author concludes.

President Joe Biden’s gravest electoral vulnerability is that he appears weak. The recent Pew poll shows half of its respondents, in half the middle-income nations surveyed, enthused about adopting a form of government in which “a strong leader can make decisions without interference from parliament or the courts.” The pernicious appeal of strongmen is that they profess to offer magical solutions. Yet most of us spend lifetimes learning that no such things exist—that our governments can only realistically aspire to manage intractable difficulties, not banish them.

The “solutions” that Donald Trump offers are as simplistic as those of an old frontier gunfighter. Their spurious plausibility is perhaps unsurprising in a society ever-more poisoned by private ownership of firearms. But in truth Trump is a weak man masquerading as a strong one. In the White House, he would be powerless to achieve the outcomes that he promises because they represent fantasies.

It’s terrifying that our greatest democracy should be within range of possibility of re-electing as its president a self-proclaimed would-be dictator, who thinks that Adolf Hitler “did some good things.”

USDA Rural Development to host community outreach event at UOG

HILO, Hawaii—On Tuesday, April 23, 2024 USDA Rural Development Hawaii/Western Pacific State director Chris Kanazawa, Rural Housing Service administrator Joaquin Altoro, and USDA RD program representatives will provide an overview of loans and grants available for rural area residents, businesses and cooperatives in Guam and Western Pacific in an outreach event at the University of Guam.

Kanazawa said the event will provide an excellent opportunity to meet with government and business leaders to address concerns and needs for Guam and Western Pacific. "Living on remote island communities always presents unique challenges and barriers to the access of resources readily available in rural communities on the mainland," Kanazawa stated. "Recognition of this distinction requires Rural Development to tailor its menu of programs to meet these special needs of our communities in Hawaii, Guam, and the Western Pacific."

» Event will highlight USDA's housing, community facilities, business programs

According to Altoro, it's important to make the trip from Washington, D.C. to see firsthand how USDA Rural Development can help with rural areas throughout the Western Pacific.

"As RHS Administrator, two of my key priorities consist of working diligently with our staff to ensure we are implementing necessary policy changes and expanding the reach of our programs and resources to all communities across the nation—including underserved rural residents in the U.S. Pacific Islands."

Altoro added that USDA Rural Development is a vital housing asset. "USDA Rural Housing is an important partner in the planning, design, and financing of community and housing infrastructure in rural communities. We are an important resource provider, and my hope is to continue to be a committed partner for rural communities in Guam and neighboring U.S. territories to address their unique housing and community infrastructure needs."

Social Security to expand SSI rental subsidy policy

Last Thursday, the Social Security Administration published a final rule, "Expansion of the Rental Subsidy Policy for Supplemental Security Income Applicants and Recipients." This rule provides the second of several updates to the agency's SSI regulations that will help people receiving and applying for SSI.

"Our mission is to continue to help people access crucial benefits, including SSI," said Martin O'Malley, commissioner of Social Security. "Simplifying and expanding our rental subsidy policy nationwide is another common-sense solution that will improve program equality and will reduce agency time spent calculating and administering rental subsidy."

SSI provides monthly payments to adults and children with a disability or blindness, and to adults aged 65 and older, who have limited income and resources. SSI benefits can help pay for basic needs like rent, food, clothing, and medicine. People applying for and receiving SSI must meet eligibility requirements, including income and resource limits.

The final rule expanding the rental subsidy policy is another announcement that removes barriers to accessing SSI payments. Learn about "Omitting Food from In-Kind Support and Maintenance (ISM) Calculations." (PR)

» Agency continues to remove barriers to accessing SSI payments

The agency continuously examines programmatic policies and makes regulatory and sub-regulatory changes as appropriate. Look for more announcements in the coming weeks.

European nations with Patriot missiles hesitate to give air defense systems to Ukraine

BRUSSELS (AP)—European Union countries possessing Patriot air defense systems gave no clear signal on Monday whether they might be willing to supply them to Ukraine, which is desperately seeking at least seven of the missile batteries to help fend off Russian air attacks. Russia's air force is vastly more powerful than Ukraine's, but sophisticated missile systems provided by Kyiv's Western partners can pose a major threat as the Kremlin's forces slowly push forward along the roughly 1,000-kilometer (620-mile) front line in the war. Only Germany has come forward with a single Patriot missile battery in answer to Ukraine's latest request. At a meeting of EU foreign and defense ministers, Dutch Foreign Minister Hanke Bruins Slot said the Netherlands is "looking at every kind of possibility at the moment" and is offering financial support to a German initiative to help Ukraine bolster its air defenses and to buy more drones. Asked why the Netherlands is reluctant to send some of its Patriot systems, Slot said: "We are looking again if we can deplete our store of what we still have, but that will be difficult."

N. Korean leader Kim leads rocket drills that simulate nuclear counterattack against enemies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—North Korean leader Kim Jong Un supervised salvo launches of the country's "super-large" multiple rocket launchers that simulated a nuclear counterattack against enemy targets, state media said Tuesday, adding to tests and threats that have raised tensions in the region. The report by North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency came a day after the South Korean and Japanese militaries detected the North firing what they suspected were multiple short-range ballistic missiles from a region near its capital, Pyongyang, toward its eastern seas. Analysts say North Korea's large-sized artillery rockets blur the boundary between artillery systems and ballistic missiles because they can create their own thrust and are guided during delivery.

The North has described some of these systems, including the 600mm multiple rocket launchers that were tested Monday, as capable of delivering tactical nuclear warheads. KCNA said Monday's launches represented the first demonstration of the country's nuclear-weapons management and control system called "Haekbangashoe," or "nuclear trigger." The report described the drill as aimed at demonstrating the strength and diverse attack means of North Korea's nuclear forces amid deepening tensions with the United States and South Korea, which it portrayed as "warmongers" raising tensions in the region with their combined military exercises.

JERUSALEM (AP)—Satellite photos taken Monday suggest an apparent Israeli retaliatory strike targeting Iran's central city of Isfahan hit a radar system for a Russian-made air defense battery, contradicting repeated denials by officials in Tehran of any damage in the assault. The strike on an

S-300 radar in what appears to have been a very limited strike by the Israelis would represent far more damage done than in the massive drone-and-missile attack Iran unleashed against Israel on April 13. That may be why Iranian officials up to Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei have been trying to dismiss discussing what the attack actually did on Iranian soil. Analysts believe both Iran and Israel, regional archrivals locked in a shadow war for years, now are trying to dial back tensions following a series of escalatory attacks between them as the Israel-Hamas war in the Gaza Strip still rages and inflames the wider region. But a strike on the most advanced air defense system Iran possesses and uses to protect its nuclear sites sends a message, experts say. "This strike shows Israel has the ability to penetrate Iran's air defense systems," said Nicole Grajewski, a fellow at the Carnegie Endowment's nuclear policy program who wrote a forthcoming book on Russia and Iran. "The precision of it was quite remarkable."

Review of UN agency helping Palestinian refugees found Israel did not express concern about staff

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—An independent review of the neutrality of the U.N. agency helping Palestinian refugees found that Israel never expressed concern about anyone on the staff lists it has received annually since 2011. The review was carried out after Israel alleged that a dozen employees of the agency known as UNRWA had participated in Hamas' Oct. 7 attacks. In a wide-ranging 48-page report released Monday, the independent panel said UNRWA has "robust" procedures to uphold the U.N. principle of neutrality, but it cited serious gaps in implementation, including staff publicly expressing political views, textbooks used in schools the agency runs with "problematic content" and staff unions disrupting operations. It makes 50 recommendations to improve UNRWA's neutrality. From 2017 to 2022, the report said, the annual number of allegations of neutrality being breached at UNRWA ranged from seven to 55. But between January 2022 and February 2024, U.N. investigators received 151 allegations, most related to social media posts "made public by external sources," it said.

Mallory's last letter from Everest said odds of reaching the top were '50 to 1 against us'

By BRIAN MELLEY
Associated Press

In his final letter to his wife before he vanished on Mount Everest a century ago, George Mallory tried to ease her worries even as he said his chances of reaching the world's highest peak were "50 to 1 against us."

The letter, digitized for the first time and published online Monday by his Cambridge University alma mater, expressed a mix of optimism, exhaustion and the difficulties his expedition encountered on their quest to be the first party to conquer the peak.

"Darling I wish you the best I can — that your anxiety will be at an end before you get this—with the best news," he wrote to Ruth Mallory on May 27, 1924 from Camp I. "It is 50 to 1 against us but we'll have a whack yet & do ourselves proud."

It remains a mystery whether Mallory, who once famously said he wanted to conquer Everest "because it's there," and climbing partner Andrew Irvine reached the summit and died on the way down or never made it that far. Mallory's body was found 75 years later far below the peak, but Irvine's has never been located.

British mountaineers George Mallory is seen with Andrew Irvine at the base camp in Nepal, both members of the Mount Everest expeditions 1922 and 1924, as they get ready to climb the peak of Mount Everest June 1924. AP

The first documented ascent came nearly three decades later when New Zealander Edmund Hillary and Nepalese Sherpa Tenzing Norgay scaled the mountain on May 29, 1953.

Magdalene College posted the letters online to mark the centenary of Mallory's ill-fated attempt to stand atop the world. The collection, which had previously been available to researchers, also includes letters he wrote from the battlefield in World War I and correspondence he received from others, including his wife.

The only surviving letter his wife wrote from England during the expedition was sent as his party sailed toward Bombay. It recounts a recent snowstorm, how her bank account was overdrawn and how she fell off a ladder before telling him how much she missed him.

"I know I have rather often been cross and not nice and I am very sorry but the bottom reason has nearly always been because I was unhappy at getting so little of you," Ruth Mallory wrote on March 3, 1924. "I know it is pretty stupid to spoil the times I do have you for those when I don't."

In his final six-page correspondence to his wife, addressed to "My dearest Ruth," George Mallory speaks of trials and triumphs as the party slowly made its way up the mountain, setting up higher camps and then retreating to lower elevation to recover.

"This has been a bad time altogether," Mallory wrote 12 days before he was last seen alive. "I look back on tremendous efforts & exhaustion & dismal looking out of a tent door and onto a world of snow & vanishing hopes—& yet, & yet, & yet there have been a good many things to set on the other side."

Mallory said he had a nagging cough "fit to tear one's guts" that left him sleepless and made climbing difficult. He described a near-death plunge into a crevasse when he failed to detect it beneath a blanket of snow.

"In I went with the snow tumbling all around me, down luckily only about 10 feet before I fetched up half-blind & breathless to find myself most precariously supported only by my ice ax somehow caught across the crevasse & still held in my right hand," he said. "Below was a very unpleasant black hole."

Mallory said only one member of the party remained "plum fit" and they planned to rest up for two days before pushing for the summit, which was expected to take six days.

Mallory and Irvine were last seen alive June 8, 1924 when they were said to be still going strong some 900 feet (274 meters) beneath the 29,035 feet (8,850 meters) summit. Mallory's body was found at 26,700 feet (8,138 meters).

Celebrity handbag designer sentenced to 18 months in prison for smuggling crocodile handbags

MIAMI (AP)—A leading fashion designer whose accessories were used by celebrities from Britney Spears to the cast of the "Sex and the City" TV series was sentenced Monday to 18 months in prison after pleading guilty in Miami federal court on charges of smuggling crocodile handbags from her native Colombia.

Nancy Gonzalez was arrested in 2022 in Cali, Colombia, and later extradited to the U.S. for running a sprawling multiyear conspiracy that involved recruiting couriers to transport her handbags on commercial flights to high-end showrooms and New York fashion events—all in violation of U.S. wildlife laws.

"It's all driven by the money," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Watts-Fitzgerald, who compared Gonzalez's behavior to that of drug traffickers. "If you want to deter the conduct, you want the cocaine kingpin, not the person in the field."

Lawyers for Gonzalez sought leniency for the celebrity designer, describing her journey as a divorced single mother of two children who designed belts on a home sewing machine in Cali for friends into a fashion icon who outcompeted the likes of Dior, Prada and Gucci.

"She was determined to show her children and the world that women, including minority women like herself, can pursue their dreams successfully, and become financially independent," they wrote in a memo prior to Monday's hearing. "Against all odds, this tiny but mighty woman was able to create the very first luxury, high-end fashion company from a third world country."

The attorneys said the 71-year-old designer has already paid dearly for her crimes. The Colombian company she built, which once employed 300 mostly female employees, declared bankruptcy and stopped operating after her arrest.

They also argued that only 1% of the merchandise she imported into the U.S. lacked proper authorization and were samples for New York Fashion week and other events.

Gonzalez, addressing the court before sentencing, said she deeply regretted not meticulously complying with U.S. laws and that her only wish is to hug once more her 103-year-old mother.

Flurry of new sounds drifts through quiet

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a lovely older neighborhood and have enjoyed wonderful neighbors over many years. The homes are close together with windows often left open in spring, summer and fall, as large shade trees keep our homes cool.

A couple of years ago, our longtime next-door neighbors moved, and a new neighbor, a single woman, moved in. She was quiet, and we would occasionally visit in the yard. Well, over the last few months, a "problem" has developed. This neighbor has a new male friend who is there much of the time. Since the new friend's arrival, loud moaning sounds frequently emanate from her home.

It quickly went from a bit funny to shocking to annoying. It's unbelievable how loud and prolonged the moaning sounds are, the "Oh, Gods," the slapping and spanking sounds, not to mention the frequent back-to-back sessions.

Other neighbors hear it and have commented, so it's not just we who are offended. One neighbor thought someone was in distress and almost called the police until another neighbor told her what it was. It has awakened us and kept us up at night. Also of concern is that there are small children among our nearest neighbors.

Abby, is there anything you can suggest I do so our neighbor keeps her private business private without embarrassing or offending her? I would sure like to put an end to the auditory assault.

KEPT AWAKE IN OHIO

DEAR KEPT AWAKE: Approach your neighbor privately and inform her that the sounds of her lovemaking are creating a disturbance not only for you, but also for the other neighbors. Tell her that one of them nearly called the cops, but someone was able to stop the person. Then suggest that when she entertains her gentleman caller, they close the windows, because not only are people scandalized, but there are children who can hear what's going on. Then cross your fingers. If the noise isn't abated, DO inform the authorities. Perhaps they can be more persuasive.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to my husband for 40 (long) years. Whenever I do something wrong, I get a note on the kitchen counter. This has gone on for years and years. This is the note I woke up to this morning. "Why did you leave the light on in the garage? To burn it out to see what I would do? I will do nothing except go to the garage in daylight." He always makes it seem like I purposely do things. I'm tired of being treated like this. What is his problem?

DEAR NOTES: I will assume you have addressed this directly with your husband. For whatever reason, he is hesitant to communicate with you face-to-face, which is why he resorts to notes on the kitchen counter. Instead of openly expressing his annoyance, he expresses it indirectly, which is the definition of passive-aggression. The next time it happens, call him on it—and confront him directly.

Murray sinks shot at buzzer to cap 20-point comeback and lead Nuggets past Lakers DENVER (AP)—Jamal Murray sank a 15-foot step-back jumper at the buzzer and the Denver Nuggets wiped out a 20-point second-half deficit to stun the Los Angeles Lakers 101-99 Monday night and take a 2-0 lead in their Western Conference playoff series.

Murray's fadeaway, falling-down game-winner provided the Nuggets with their first lead since 5-3 in the opening minutes and gave the reigning NBA champions their 10th consecutive win over the Lakers.

The series shifts to Los Angeles for Game 3 Thursday night.

Murray's winning shot came after LeBron James misfired from long range with 16 seconds left and the game tied at 99.

Michael Porter Jr. grabbed the rebound with 13 seconds left and the Nuggets didn't call a timeout.

Instead, Murray took the ball to the right side with Anthony Davis guarding him, stepped back and swished the basket just as the buzzer sounded. Both Murray and Davis fell into the Nuggets' bench as the sellout crowd's roar shook Ball Arena.

Murray finished with 20 points, including 14 in the fourth quarter, and Nikola Jokic posted a triple-double with 27 points, 20 boards and 10 assists. Porter added 22 points and Aaron Gordon 14 for Denver.

AP

Denver Nuggets guard Jamal Murray (27) drives to the basket against Los Angeles Lakers guard Austin Reaves (15) during the first half in Game 2 of an NBA basketball first-round playoff series Monday, April 22, 2024, in Denver.

Davis led the Lakers with 32 points, James had 26 and D'Angelo Russell added 23 with a career playoff-high seven 3s.

The Lakers led 59-44 at halftime and stretched their advantage to 68-48 two minutes into the second half, and it sure looked like L.A. would beat Denver for the first time in 494 days. They still led by 10 entering the fourth quarter.

"I don't have a 20-point play," Nuggets coach Michael Malone said. "You've got to just keep chipping away."

That, they did, finally tying it at 95-all on Porter's 3-pointer with 1:15 left.

Russell's biggest basket was his layup that gave L.A. a 97-95 lead with a minute to go. Murray was fouled by James and sank both free throws to tie it again.

James responded with a layup for L.A. with 48 seconds left but Murray matched him again with a step-back jumper at 30 seconds. Then, James missed from long range, Porter corralled the rebound and the Nuggets were on their way to one of the biggest shots in franchise history.

Murray, who started out 3 of 16, went 6-for-8 in the fourth quarter.

Russell sank three 3s in the opening minutes, matching the number of 3-pointers he had in the Lakers' last five playoff games against Denver. He made just one of his nine 3s in the series opener after going 2-for-15 in the Western Conference finals last summer, which led to his benching in Game 4. He finished 7 of 11.

CAVALIERS 96, MAGIC 86

van Mitchell scored 23 points, Jarrett Allen had 20 rebounds and the Cleveland Cavaliers outlasted the Orlando Magic 96-86 on Monday night to take a 2-0 lead in their first-round Eastern Conference series.

Mitchell set the tone as the Cavs led from start to finish, just as they did in Game 1.

It's been an impressive opening to the playoffs for Cleveland, which spent the regular season waiting for a chance to redeem itself following last year's first-round exit against the New York Knicks, who punished the Cavs in five games.

Cleveland has been much tougher this time around.

Evan Mobley added 17 points and Allen scored 16—with nine offensive rebounds—for the Cavs.

Paolo Banchero scored 21 points and Franz Wagner 18 for the Magic, who have only come back to win one playoff series in 13 tries when losing the series opener. They're now in an even deeper hole.

Game 3 of the best-of-seven series is Thursday in Orlando.

Magic guard Jalen Suggs went down with a sprained left knee in the first quarter. He collapsed to the floor after making contact with Mitchell and immediately grabbed his leg in pain. After being helped up, an emotional Suggs couldn't put any weight on his leg as he was carried to the locker room.

However, the former high school football star returned after halftime with a sleeve on his leg.

KNICKS 104, 76ERS 101

NEW YORK (AP)—Donte DiVincenzo made a go-ahead 3-pointer with 13 seconds remaining after a desperate scramble, and New York beat Philadelphia to take a 2-0 lead in their first-round playoff series.

The Knicks trailed by five points within the final 30 seconds, on the verge of losing home-court advantage before a stunning rally, starting when Jalen Brunson finally got a shot to fall during an otherwise miserable night.

Brunson's 3-pointer from the corner bounced on the rim and fell in, cutting it to 101-99 with 27 seconds remaining.

Josh Hart stole the ball from Tyrese Maxey to get the ball back for the Knicks, but DiVincenzo missed a 3-pointer. Isaiah Hartenstein grabbed the rebound and passed it to OG Anunoby, who got it back to DiVincenzo, who hit that one to make it 102-101.

Hartenstein then blocked Maxey's drive, Anunoby made two free throws, and the Knicks held on when Joel Embiid missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer.

Brunson finished with 24 points despite going 8 for 29 from the field. Josh Hart had 21 points and 15 rebounds, and DiVincenzo scored 19 points.

Maxey had 35 points, 10 assists and nine rebounds in a brilliant performance after he was ill earlier in the day. Embiid had 34 points and 10 rebounds.

THE YEAR

Golden State's Stephen Curry, Chicago's DeMar DeRozan and Oklahoma City's Gilgeous-Alexander are the finalists for the clutch player of the year.

DeRozan was a finalist last year as well, when Sacramento's De'Aaron Fox won.

COACH OF THE YEAR

Oklahoma City's Mark Daigneault, Minnesota's Chris Finch and Orlando's Jamahl Mosley were the top three vote-getters.

Daigneault already won the coach of the year award presented by the National Basketball Coaches Association—not the official NBA award, but one that since it was introduced in 2017 often mirrors the eventual results of league voting.

Over its first seven seasons, one of the NBPA selections (there have been co-winners twice) wound up as the NBA winner five times.

Sacramento's Mike Brown was last year's unanimous winner, with Daigneault and Boston's Joe Mazzulla the other finalists in 2023.

By TIM REYNOLDS

AP Basketball Writer

Nikola Jokic is one step closer to winning a third MVP award in the last four seasons. Victor Wembanyama is surely on his way to a trophy—or maybe two. Shai Gilgeous-Alexander might get a couple of his own as well.

The NBA revealed the finalists for most of the league's postseason awards Sunday—and to no surprise, Jokic, the Denver Nuggets' star, was one of the three top vote-getters for the top individual honor, the Michael Jordan trophy that gets presented to the league's Most Valuable Player.

The others: Dallas' Luka Doncic and Oklahoma City's Gilgeous-Alexander. Last season's MVP, Joel Embiid of the Philadelphia 76ers, was not eligible this year because of the new league rule saying players must appear in a certain number of games for award participation.

If he wins, Jokic would become the ninth player with three or more MVPs, joining Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (six), Jordan and Bill Russell (five), Wilt Chamberlain and LeBron James (four), and Moses Malone, Larry Bird and Magic Johnson (three).

Doncic and Gilgeous-Alexander would be first-time MVPs. Gilgeous-Alexander was a finalist for Most Improved Player last year—and this year, he's in line for the MVP prize.

This much is already assured: It'll be the sixth consecutive year that an international player wins MVP, extending the longest such streak in NBA history. Giannis Antetokounmpo—he of Greek and Nigerian heritage—won in 2019 and 2020, Serbia's Jokic won in 2021 and 2022 and Embiid won last season. Embiid was born in Cameroon, though became an American citizen in 2022 and has been selected for the team that will represent USA Basketball at the Paris Olympics this summer.

The other finalists are Oklahoma City's Chet Holmgren—who helped the Thunder to the No. 1 seed in the Western Conference—and Charlotte's Brandon Miller.

"Leading rookies in most categories and leading the league in blocks, I'm pretty proud of this," Wembanyama said.

Wembanyama should become the first international winner of the award since Dallas' Luka Doncic in 2019 and the fifth such winner in the last 10 seasons. Andrew Wiggins (Canada) won in 2015, Karl-Anthony Towns (Dominican Republic) won in 2016, Ben Simmons (Australia) won in 2018 and Doncic followed the next season.

DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Miami's Bam Adebayo, Utah's Rudy Gobert and Wembanyama were the three finalists—meaning the Spurs rookie is now assured of being top-three in two different sets of voting.

None of last season's finalists made the top three this year. Memphis' Jaren Jackson Jr. won the award last season, with Milwaukee's Brook Lopez and Cleveland's Evan Mobley the other finalists in 2023.

MOST IMPROVED PLAYER

Philadelphia's Tyrese Maxey, Chicago's Coby White and Houston's Alperen Sengun are this year's finalists.

Utah's Lauri Markkanen won last year, with Gilgeous-Alexander and New York's Jalen Brunson the other finalists.

SIXTH MAN OF THE YEAR

Milwaukee's Bobby Portis is a finalist again, along with Sacramento's Malik Monk and Minnesota's Naz Reid.

Malcolm Brogdon, then of Boston, won the award last year, with Portis and New York's Immanuel Quickley the other finalists.

CLUTCH PLAYER OF

9th inning 2-run homer all A's need to beat Yankees after 1st-inning ejection of Boone

NEW YORK
(AP)—Zack Gelfof hit a two-run homer off Victor González in the ninth inning, and the Oakland Athletics stopped an eight-game losing streak in the Bronx by beating the Yankees 2-0 Monday following the ejection of New York manager Aaron Boone just five pitches in.

After New York's Carlos Rodón and Oakland's JP Sears matched each other with shutout ball, Abraham Toro reached off González (1-1) leading off the ninth when the pitcher slipped while trying to pick up his dribbler between the mound and the third-base line.

Gelfof hit an opposite-field drive into the right-field seats on a flat sinker for his third home run this season.

Lucas Erceg (1-1) pitched two innings and Mason Miller struck out Anthony Volpe, Juan Soto and Aaron Judge to remain perfect in five save chances, finishing a three-hitter and the fourth shutout against the Yankees in 23 games this season.

Oakland, which arrived after getting swept in a three-game series at Cleveland, had not won at the Yankees since 2021.

Judge was 0 for 4 with a pair of strikeouts and a double-play grounder, dropping his average to .174.

Ian Hamilton had gotten Shea Langeliers to swing under a high 96.1 mph fastball on a full count to strand the bases loaded in the eighth.

TIGERS 7, RAYS 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)— Tarik Skubal struck out nine over six scoreless innings, Mark Canha and Parker Meadows homered, and Detroit beat Tampa Bay.

The Tigers improved to 9-3 on the road this season.

Skubal (3-0) scattered three hits in winning his seventh consecutive decision, dating to last September. The left-hander is 2-0 in four starts against the Rays, allowing two earned runs over 17 1/3 innings.

José Caballero homered in the eighth inning off Shelby Miller as the Rays have lost three of four and six of 10. Tampa Bay had one runner reach second base against Skubal.

PHILLIES 7, RAYS 1

CINCINNATI (AP)—Ranger Suárez allowed two hits in seven innings and Kody Clemens hit a three-run homer as Philadelphia extended their winning streak to seven games with a victory over Cincinnati.

Suárez (4-0) ran his scoreless streak to 25 innings. He's won his last four starts, including a 112-pitch shutout against Colorado last Tuesday. This time, he yielded two singles, struck out five and walked one.

Gregory Soto and Jeff Hoffman completed the two-hitter for Philadelphia's fourth shutout this season, tying Cleveland for most in the majors.

Cincinnati was blanked for the first time this season.

PIRATES 4, BREWERS 2

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Oneil Cruz

two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning that gave St. Louis Cardinals a victory over Arizona.

It was the fourth home run this season for Gorman, who entered as a defensive replacement in the eighth. Paul Goldschmidt, who homered earlier, reached on an infield single before Gorman hit left-hander Kyle Nelson's only pitch into the right-field seats.

Ryan Helsley (2-2) worked a scoreless inning to help the Cardinals halt a four-game losing streak.

Ryan Thompson (0-1) took the loss. Eugenio Suárez sparked Arizona with three hits and two RBIs.

GIANTS 5, METS 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Michael Conforto homered against the team that drafted him in the first round a decade ago, helping to back rookie Keaton Winn's latest stellar outing as San Francisco beat the New York Mets.

Nick Ahmed hit a two-run single in the second and Matt Chapman added a two-run double the next inning to support Winn (2-3). He struck out six while allowing four hits in six-plus innings, receiving a standing ovation when Ryan Walker relieved in the seventh after a leadoff walk to Francisco Lindor that was Winn's lone free pass.

Pete Alonso homered leading off the fifth for New York—its first run in two days following a 10-0 loss to the Dodgers on Sunday. Camilo Doval's wild pitch with one out in the ninth allowed another run before he retired Alonso on a grounder, walked Brett Baty then got DJ Stewart on a groundout to end it.

ORIOLES 4, ANGELS 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—Craig Kimbrel struck out Mike Trout looking with the bases loaded for the final out, and Baltimore beat the Los Angeles Angels for their seventh win in eight games.

James McCann and Colton Cowsier homered and Adley Rutschman drove in two runs for the Orioles, who moved into first place in the AL East. They improved to 3-1 on their road trip while winning the 10,000th regular-season game in Angels history.

Albert Suárez (1-0) pitched four-hit ball into the sixth inning to earn his first major league victory since 2016 for Baltimore, but Kimbrel barely hung on in a tumultuous ninth inning to secure his sixth save.

Baltimore's veteran closer hit Jo Adell with a pitch and allowed Logan O'Hoppe's third hit of the night to start the ninth. Pinch-hitter Luis Rengifo drew a one-out walk to load the bases, but Nolan Schuelan popped up before Trout didn't swing at two consecutive high fastballs.

Adell homered for the Angels, who opened a nine-game homestand with their fifth straight loss. Adell's shot off Mike Baumann in the seventh ended the Angels' streak of 18 consecutive scoreless innings, but Los Angeles has lost eight of 10.

broke out of a slump with three hits, Jared Jones allowed one run in six innings and Pittsburgh ended their skid at six games, beating Milwaukee to stop the Brewers' four-game win streak.

Cruz capped a three-run sixth with a two-out, two-run single. He also singled in the second and dropped a double into right-center in the fourth. The 6-foot-7 shortstop was 4 for 44 in his previous 12 games.

Jones (2-2) gave up four hits and two walks. The 22-year-old rookie struck out seven and has 39 strikeouts through five starts, with at least seven in each.

The Pirates, following an 11-5 start, were outscored 36-9 in back-to-back three-game sweeps by the Mets and Red Sox. The Brewers were coming off a three-game sweep at St. Louis.

David Bednar picked up his third save, allowing only an infield hit by Jackson Chourio in the ninth.

Joe Ross (1-2) gave up two runs on six hits in 5 1/3 innings for Milwaukee.

Andrew McCutchen led off the first for Pittsburgh with a 414-foot homer to center, his first of three hits. He hit his 1,000th single in the majors in the third.

Rhys Hoskins homered off Jones leading off the fifth, then walked to load the bases with two outs in the sixth. Jones retired Blake Perkins on a comebacker to end that threat.

BRAVES 3, MARLINS 0

ATLANTA (AP)—Travis d'Arnaud hit his fifth home run in four games and Bryce Elder pitched 6 2/3 spotless innings in his return from the minors as Atlanta beat Miami.

David Fletcher capped a three-run fourth with an RBI single to help the Braves win for the seventh time in eight games.

Recalled from Triple-A Gwinnett earlier in the day, Elder (1-0) scattered eight hits in his first major league start this season. The right-hander struck out four and walked none.

Pierce Johnson got one out and A.J. Minter pitched the eighth. Raisel Iglesias worked a perfect ninth for his seventh save in seven chances, finishing an eight-hitter that marked Atlanta's first shutout of the season.

Ryan Weathers (2-2) gave up three runs and six hits in 5 2/3 innings. He struck out one and walked three.

TWINS 7, WHITE SOX 0

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Max Kepler had two hits and three RBIs in his return from the injured list and the Minnesota beat the Chicago White Sox.

Chris Paddack struck out 10 in seven innings to win as a starter for the first time in nearly two years. Edouard Julien homered among his three hits for Minnesota.

Blanked for the eighth time this season and once in each series, Chicago has lost 10 of 11. Danny Mendick had two hits, and Gavin Sheets and manager Pedro Grifol were ejected for arguing balls and strikes in the eighth inning.

Paddack (1-1) scattered just six hits and walked none for his first win as a starter since May 2, 2022. The right-hander underwent his second Tommy John surgery shortly thereafter and did not return until late last season, getting a win in relief Sept. 30.

BLUE JAYS 5, ROYALS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Bo Bichette had a bases-clearing triple, Daulton Varsho hit a two-run homer and Toronto beat the Kansas City.

Yusei Kikuchi (2-1) was efficient early, allowing one baserunner on 48 pitches in the first five innings.

He ran into trouble in the sixth, allowing a two-run home run by Maikel Garcia. With two outs, Vinnie Pasquantino hit an infield single and Salvador Perez followed with a double. But Kikuchi retired Nelson Velázquez on a grounder to end the threat.

Right-hander Tyler Duffey, whose contract was selected from Triple-A Omaha earlier Monday, worked two scoreless innings in relief, striking out three. Jordan Romano surrendered a homer by Kyle Isbel in the ninth but finished for his third save.

Brady Singer (2-1) allowed five runs on five hits in six innings. He struck out five and walked three, all of whom scored.

Singer struck out the first two Toronto batters in the second inning, becoming the 19th Royals pitcher to reach 500 career strikeouts. He tied Steve Busby as the fastest Royals pitcher to achieve the milestone, getting there in his 100th appearance.

PADRES 3, ROCKIES 1

DENVER (AP)—Dylan Cease permitted one hit in seven dominant innings and pinch-hitter Tyler Wade singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth, sending San Diego to a victory over the struggling Colorado Rockies on Monday night.

Cease (3-1) struck out eight and walked none, allowing only one baserunner in a 90-pitch outing. Acquired from the Chicago White Sox in a March 13 trade, the right-hander lowered his ERA to 1.82—his best mark through five outings in six major league seasons.

Luis Campusano had two hits for the Padres and scored the go-ahead run. San Diego has won 10 of the past 12 meetings between the NL West rivals dating to last April.

Former Falcons QB Matt Ryan officially announces retirement

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (AP)—On the very first pass of his very first NFL minicamp, Matt Ryan delivered a wobbly throw that left his new Atlanta Falcons teammates shaking their heads.

They couldn't help but wonder if the team made a huge mistake drafting this skinny kid out of Boston College with the No. 3 overall pick in 2008.

"He threw a duck," said former Falcons receiver Michael Jenkins, chuckling at the memory. "We're like, 'Uh, is this the guy?'"

He was.

After putting up numbers that will surely put him in consideration for the Pro Football Hall of Fame, Ryan formally announced his retirement Monday to cap a 15-year career in which he spent all but one season as the steady-as-they-come quarterback of the Falcons.

He signed a one-day contract with Atlanta so he could officially close his career with his longtime team.

"I took the hometown discount," Ryan quipped.

prise, given the quarterback had not played since a single disappointing season with the Indianapolis Colts in 2022. He worked last season as an analyst for CBS, receiving a rousing ovation when he called a game in Atlanta.

Ryan, who turns 39 next month, threw for 62,792 yards and 381 touchdowns in his career, quickly becoming the face of the Falcons during the most successful era in franchise history.

He ranks seventh in NFL history for passing yards, ninth in career TD passes and won the league MVP award in 2016 when he guided the Falcons to only their second Super Bowl appearance in franchise history.

But Ryan came up heartbreakingly shy of the ultimate goal when Atlanta squandered a 28-3 lead to Tom Brady and the New England Patriots in the title game, losing 34-28 in overtime.

"It hurts," Ryan conceded. "It's one of those things that's always a part of you. Falling short of what you ultimately set out to do is tough. But that's life. There's so many things in your life that are going to go that way. You've got to pick up and move on."

The lack of a championship inning for a 2-2 game.

Angel Deleon Guerrero, the Lady Blue Jays' ace, brought her A game and went on to shut down BDE's lineup from the second to the fourth. Only one BDE batter got a hit in the third inning—Keina Rogopes—but the rest either struck out or grounded out. Deleon Guerrero also had a robust defense behind her that allowed her to bring down BDE, until the fifth inning when BDE's Maribel Igital got on base and later scored. Before that, the Lady Blue Jays' Carey Demapan, Christy Aldan, Rayna Deleon Guerrero, and Alannah Sablan all scored to lead, 5-2. With Igital's run, it became a 5-3 game.

— and the improbable way the Falcons lost to the Patriots—could hurt Ryan's bid for a spot in Canton.

"Obviously, if you had that Super Bowl victory, it might make things a little easier," Jenkins said. "But I do think he's a Hall of Famer."

Jenkins was among three former teammates who attended Ryan's retirement announcement at the Falcons training complex in suburban Flowery Branch. Team owner Arthur Blank sat with Ryan's wife, Sarah, and the couple's three young sons.

Ex-Atlanta center Todd McClure, who snapped the ball to Ryan for his first five seasons, will always remember how the guy who became known as Matty Ice helped steady the franchise as a rookie.

The Falcons were reeling from franchise quarterback Michael Vick being sent to prison for running a dog-fighting operation and Bobby Petrino abandoning the head coaching position after just 13 games the previous season.

Right from the start, Ryan brought much-needed professionalism to the locker room to go along with stellar play on the field, leading the Falcons to a surprising playoff berth in 2008 coming off an awful 4-12 season.

"You look back, the Petri-no fiasco and everything that happened with Mike," McClure said. "To be able to get a guy that would come to this organization and play for as long as he did, be the ultimate competitor, the ultimate pro, it meant a lot. He steadied the franchise. He steadied the fan base."

Ryan's rookie campaign turned out to be the first of five straight winning seasons for a team that had never put together even back-to-back records above .500 over the first 42 years of its existence.

Ryan thanked pretty much everyone who worked in the Falcons organization, from Blank and the front office, to the coaches and players, and even included a shoutout to the training staff and media relations team for contributing to his success.

But he reserved the biggest thanks for his wife, who he met when both were athletes at Boston College.

"I would not have had the career that I've had without you," Ryan said, his voice choking with emotion. "I prided myself on coming to the building every day with the same mindset and being consistent for my teammates. But I know I wasn't that for you when I came home. You are the one person on the planet who saw how it really was every day for me."

Ryan would lead Atlanta to one more playoff appearance in 2017—a season he's especially proud of coming off that Super Bowl debacle and the Falcons becoming the butt of jokes from around the nation.

But Ryan closed his career with five straight losing campaigns. When the Falcons went into rebuilding mode after the 2021 season, the aging QB and his mammoth contract were dealt to the Colts for a mere third-round draft pick.

His tenure in Indianapolis didn't go as planned.

Ryan posted a 4-7-1 record as the starter, had a career-low 14 touchdown passes and was benched for the first time in his pro career. At the end of the season, he was quietly let go by the Colts.

The Lady Blue Jays blasted their formidable foe, BDE, 7-4, for a one-win lead in the series.

While BDE scored first and put up two runs at the top of the first, the Lady Blue Jays tied it up quickly in the second inning for a 2-2 game. Angel Deleon Guerrero, the Lady Blue Jays' ace, brought her A game and went on to shut down BDE's lineup from the second to the fourth. Only one BDE batter got a hit in the third inning—Keina Rogopes—but the rest either struck out or grounded out.

However, Angel Deleon Guerrero continued to hold down BDE's bats and the only other run scored in the seventh by Kona Tudela. Rayna and Keolani Rios scored a run each in the fifth and sixth, and with that, the game ended, 7-4.

The winter season Down Under didn't stop NMI swimmers as they broke age group records and personal bests left and right in the Oceania Swimming Championships 2024 held at the Gold Coast Aquatic Centre, in Southport, Queensland, Australia.

Notably, Moshe Sikkel and Piper Raho broke CNMI 13-14 age group records on Day 1 last Sunday and Day 2 last Monday.

Sikkel restarted the 100m backstroke last Sunday. He first recorded a 1:07.68 personal best in the prelims. He then clocked in at 1:07.40 which was faster than the previous age group swim off record of 1:07.54 held by Juhn Tenorio.

Sikkel reduced his time to a new record of 30.14 seconds. With him in the team were Taiyo Akimaru, Jinie Thompson, and Savita Sikkel and finished at 2:07.79.

For Raho, she broke the barrier for the 50m backstroke record twice as well. On Day 2 last Monday, she first reset the previous record of 35.07 seconds by Aika Watanabe in the prelims with a time of 34.81 seconds. Then, Raho reset it once more in the finals with a new record time of 34.69 seconds.

On Day 2 in the 4x200m women relay, Raho set a new personal best in her 200m freestyle portion with a time of 2:30.52. The team with Raho included

Thompson reset her PB in the 50m butterfly with a 33.62 seconds during the prelims and qualified for the finals.
